

A Few Resources regarding Creation and Science

A brief article on Intelligent Design from a Traditional Christian perspective:

<https://www.gotquestions.org/evidence-intelligent-design.html>

A site that seeks to define Intelligent Design from a purely scientific point of view:

<https://intelligentdesign.org/>

A good book on the subject for any reader is Lee Strobel, Case for the Creator, 2004. Although it has not been updated since 2004, it still presents challenging information in an understandable format.

A pretty good, impartial summary of the two perspectives on the age on the earth: <http://factsandfaith.com/young-earth-or-old-earth-an-impartial-overview-of-the-creation-debate-introduction-summary/>

An interesting debate on the subject on YouTube by Ken Ham and Jeff Zweerick :

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aNmuB9EF_vk. It's rather long, and I found the participants a bit all over the place, but it is interesting to hear the biases and perspectives that people bring to the debate.